The Board considered January 9 & 10, 2020 as the next exam date. These dates will be firm once it is approved with Delaware Technical and Community College that there are no conflicts. The June exam dates were not discussed.

Discussion Regarding Restricted Permits I & II

There was an inquiry regarding the wording on the Division website for information on restricted I permits. The below statement is from the website. According to the regulations, the statement in parentheses should read, "This does not prohibit the usual and customary pre-operative oral sedation." This error to the website will be corrected.

What Does a Restricted Permit I Allow?

A Restricted Permit I allows you to induce only conscious sedation by parenteral, enteral, or rectal routes at a specific location. (This does not include the usual and customary pre-operative oral sedation.)

An additional inquiry was made questioning the need for a restricted II permit if you have a restricted I permit that should already cover nitrous oxide usage. According to the regulations, restricted and unrestricted permits both include nitrous oxide inhalation usage as part of their definition.
